I'm getting the Voltage (mV) but not the percentage. Thanks A: You can use the PhoneApplicationService.Current.NotificationQueue.Notifications.Count for the battery percentage: if (Notifications.Count > 0) { var notification = Notifications.ElementAt(0); var batteryPercentage = notification.Package.BatteryPercentage; //do something } In case you are using a emulator or using the emulator 873 with IOS 7 you might need to change this because notifications won't be available on the simulator. Q: Ubuntu 17.10 laptop display configuration issue I recently upgraded to Ubuntu 17.10. Everything went fine and I got to experience some problems only with the new display configuration. My laptop's screen is Dell U2312M, 1440x900 resolution and I'm stuck in a mirrored configuration (as reported by the system settings > display > "Displays" section): I don't want mirroring and I want to keep the configuration I have right now. How can I change it without removing the changes? A: You can change the screen to whatever you like by simply installing (add-apt-repository ppa:ubuntu-x-swat/x-updates && apt update && apt install nvidia-375) and rebooting. As you might see, you might not need the amdgpu-pro PPA, if you use the Ubuntu that comes with the "experimental-310" driver. Even if you do need the amdgpu-pro PPA, it's still worth it to simply use apt to install it instead of downloading and installing the proprietary build of the NVIDIA driver. Q:
