- Place your bet on red/black, columns/lines, colors or odd/even. - See your profit after each round. - Make as many bets as you want. Cons: - Requires all participants in the game to be online - The default reward settings (2%/6%) was set to just before the major peak in the market. - Helps players with even minimally understanding the mechanics of Blackjack. - Bets reset with a delay. - There are multiple (mostly CPU) bottlenecks that affect the performance. All tests were performed on a MacBook Pro (2013) with the following specification: 2.6 GHz Intel Core i7 with 4 GB 1600 MHz DDR3, Intel HD Graphics 4000. Feedback Summary: • The UX may be excellent for anyone wanting to test out basic Blackjack or roulette strategies without loosing their money. • The automated roulette strategies may be really efficient and save a lot of time if you need to place numerous bets on each round. • Unfortunately, the setup may be too complex for the majority of users, who will probably lose too much money to be able to use the strategies properly. The app really is a great tool for people who want to practice blackjack to see if they have a winning strategy, before committing a bunch of money to a full-fledged online casino. It helps you keep track of your wins and losses as well. Overall, RouletteMonitor makes a great addition to Mac users. That was posted on my blog a couple of days ago, but it got some good comments. I chose to remove it because there were too many review requests to keep track of. Even though I had a bad experience with the fb app, i still think it is a very good app, with endless possibilities for the future. I'm not really a fan of all the developments on micro transactions for in-game purchases because i think it's a smart way to earn profit but i have to admit there's a lot of reasons not to engage in such activity. I've came across a new fb app called "Encash Generator". It's a great way to earn money while keeping the games fun. My really bad experience with Encash Generator came when i had bought the game from a good fb friend. I saw that he had won from 09e8f5149f
