First of all, these are devices that help transfer the substation to backup power when the main power fails. This makes it possible to reduce the negative impact on equipment and people, as well as significantly increase the service life of the power supply elements. Violation of the normal operation of one of the subsystems leads to the failure of the others. And secondly, these are constructive additions that allow, in some cases, to provide redundancy of individual batteries. The FE 70 profile is the most popular of the many profiles in this series, thanks to the butterfly valves that provide high flow and isolation.
