Results of surgery for epidermoid carcinoma of the temporal bone. Fifty-three patients with epidermoid carcinoma of the temporal bone were treated surgically during a 12-year period. The site of the primary tumor was the middle ear in two patients, the tympanic cavity in 42, and in four cases only the temporal bone was affected. The primary lesion was Stage I in 13, Stage II in 22, Stage III in seven, and Stage IV in one. The surgical approach was mastoidectomy with revision tympanoplasty in 26 patients, and in 27 patients the surgical method of first choice was a total temporal bone resection with a modified radical mastoidectomy. In 11 patients the primary lesion was subtotally resected, and in three patients only the primary tumor was removed. Fourteen patients underwent radical mastoidectomy only. Extensive exploration of the neck in patients with epidermoid carcinoma of the temporal bone is essential. In 21 of 52 patients with epidermoid carcinoma of the temporal bone, cervical metastases were found preoperatively. In ten of these 21 patients, metastases were found during or after the operation. Only 14 of 52 patients underwent a selective neck dissection. By means of statistical analysis it was found that the rate of recurrences among the patients with temporal bone epidermoid carcinoma decreased with a decrease of the operated volume, as well as with radical mastoidectomy. The rate of recurrences did not decrease in patients with more advanced tumor stage or with tumors affecting more than one side.
