Report Generation In AutoCAD, the most basic component of a report is the title block. It is the standard location for the title, author, and page information of a report. The title block also provides the ability to save drawing data to disk. AutoCAD supports the following report types: AutoCAD also supports electronic reports such as PDF and WPF. However, the report generation process is still done manually. In addition, AutoCAD supports AutoCAD Journals, which are essentially the book-style of a report. Journals may also be exported as a PDF, or as a DWF and DWFx file. Collaboration The ability to use drawing files has been extended with the introduction of the multiuser workstation. Also called multiuser CAD (MU*CAD), this feature allows multiple people to work on the same drawing at once, with everyone being able to see, alter, and comment on the current drawing. AutoCAD supports several collaborative types of working: DWF printing allows the printer to open a current drawing (document) in AutoCAD. From there, the drawing can be printed directly to the printer. DirectDWF allows the user to open a drawing from an email. Dynamic models allow the user to work on a drawing while being connected to a server over a network. When the drawing is saved, it is not saved in the local drive, but in the server, which will enable the user to continue working in real time. AutoCAD also supports electronic collaboration, where two or more users can work together on the same drawing while being located anywhere in the world. This is done by connecting the AutoCAD drawing to the internet. AutoCAD also allows three-dimensional (3D) visualizations of these drawings. Collaboration is done using a collaboration station (aka. collaborative design station). The function of the station is to enable multiple users to work in an accurate, scalable, multi-view environment in real time. Users can view, change and draw in AutoCAD from their desktops. The station may be installed on any computer that is configured to connect to the internet. Depending on the computer hardware and software, the station can display drawings from multiple locations. The station may also receive drawings from one or more locations, and display those drawings on one or more computer monitors. The drawings can be viewed, modified, drawn on, and annotated ( 5b5f913d15

For more info, please visit this link - Mitt Romney's political career got off to a rocky start on Monday when he was booed at a New Hampshire campaign event for blasting an Obama administration plan to "punish" China for not buying enough U.S. goods. The former Massachusetts governor's campaign has been trying to highlight Obama's supposed softness on China, and the remarks Romney made in Laconia on Monday signaled that the Republican ticket is pushing the economic argument to its limits. "We do not want our jobs being shipped to China, and we certainly don't want them being shipped overseas," Romney said, according to New Hampshire Union Leader reporter Joe McQuaid. "We don't want a company in Ohio or Michigan to move its operations to China to take advantage of low labor costs and low environmental regulations," he added. "We don't want a company to move its operations to China to take advantage of low tax rates. We want a company to stay in the United States. And this plan will result in our companies having more jobs than ever before, more jobs than any time since the '80s." The comments marked a contrast with the Obama campaign's attempts to distinguish the two candidates as they vie for the Democratic nomination. Obama's economic plan was released last week, and it would lower the corporate tax rate from 35 to 28 percent and eliminate tax loopholes for companies that move jobs overseas. "America can be the best place in the world to do business, but it's not right now," Obama said in an interview with MSNBC that aired Monday. "Businesses are staying here because they know that I've already cut their taxes, and that is why the American economy is growing at a rate that's three times faster than the rest of the world." But Romney wasn't about to let Obama off the hook that easily. He said his comments about China were meant to apply to Obama as well. "President Obama
