NASHVILLE – When Joe Flacco knows his team needs a stop, it helps if the man who has recorded the most career sacks in the NFL does it. On Sunday at Nissan Stadium, the Ravens were faced with a fourth-down call in the fourth quarter on a play that started to unfold in a 3-3 game. Flacco, who had only five more passes than rushes the previous season, kept things simple by taking off and running. But after the running back lost yards, Flacco hit rookie tight end Dallas Goedert over the middle for a 2-yard gain, and from there Lamar Jackson took over – running for 4, then 3 yards. On third-and-3, cornerback Marlon Humphrey got caught stepping at the line of scrimmage, allowing his man, cornerback Anthony Averett, to easily pick off Jackson. “On third-and-3 I was thinking, ‘Just hand it off, just hand it off' to make sure I had enough time to cover him," Averett said. The Ravens' greatest success on third-and-3 had been in the 2016 season opener, a 12-10 win over the Chiefs in which Flacco threw a 3-yard pass to Kyle Juszczyk to set up a field goal. But this season the Ravens have failed on third-and-3, converting just 12 of 22 attempts, with one touchdown and a missed field goal. "[Third-and-3] is a lot of little things," Averett said. "It's just constantly being on the ball. It's about making sure every second, every step, you're on top of your man." The Ravens have run 12 times on third-and-3 this season, gaining 7 yards, while completing 1 of 4 attempts. On Sunday, Jackson ran for 73 yards on 13 attempts (including 7 for 17 in the second half). Tim Muldowney Special to the Detroit Free Press Can't afford school? You should still be able to go to school. Or at least get an educational credit for your time. Republican state Rep. Travis William Barnard wants to make sure that's the case in Michigan. On Thursday, he introduced legislation that would make sixth- through 12th-grade education affordable by allowing students to earn credit toward their high school diploma for as much as half of their final course loads. But the effort might take a lot longer to become law than it did to be sparked. Barnard's bill is a "pre-conference" session measure, meaning it's a bill that can, but doesn't have to be, discussed or voted on by legislators prior to the start of the 91-day legislative session in March. It would apply to more than 10,000 students in the state who must take dual-credit classes, or general education courses with an academic credit, but can't afford to go to college or afford to take out student loans, according to Barnard's office. Under the measure, which was proposed as a joint resolution, those students could elect to get a credit for every hour they spend taking courses at the community college, vocational school or a high school. But Barnard's bill doesn't specify a maximum credit amount. And the bill's preamble includes a warning that the Michigan Legislature is an "independent" body, and suggests the bill could lead to "more opportunities for students to stay in high school," and "more opportunities for students to attend higher education." While the bill is not referred to the Michigan House or Senate Education Committees, as that would require a measure to pass both legislative chambers, Barnard said it may become law in 2015, or even later. "It's on the table," he said. "It could stay on the table the whole session. We can hope for that." Opponents of the bill point out that it doesn't allow a student to graduate from high school and receive an associate of arts degree. "No one (in the Legislature) would want to get credit for being in the class," said Jonathan Brecher of the State Board of Education. "But they can't graduate with a degree. That doesn't make sense." Creating more associate of arts degrees "allows (students) to go into even more expensive degrees, which they

Scholl of Schollkin on February 13, 2013. Back at the beginning of my site in 2006, I wrote a comparison between Windows Media Player and Winamp and talked about Winamp's benefits and shortcomings. At that time, I said that in the future, I might "discuss Winamp in more detail." I never did, and I finally got around to it today. My hope is that this article
