A mother of five children and six grandchildren, she was the grandmother of sons and daughters and brothers and sisters. She was in the prime of her life, loved by all. She was found dead in her own home on Saturday, an apparent suicide by hanging. Ms. Hosseini had been living in Durham for nine years, and her parents had moved back to Iran just five weeks ago. Friends described her as a committed Christian who loved to laugh and befriend people, and she was a happy, loving mother. "I'm so surprised and saddened by the news of the loss of our dear sister, Hajar," her mother, Minoos Hosseini, wrote on her Facebook page. "I'm so upset that her faith was not strong enough to protect her or give her the comfort she needed in her last moments of life." Her death has left her friends and family wondering: how could such a vibrant, young woman choose death when her life was bursting with such promise? "She was so positive, encouraging and happy in her life and it seemed she was never saddened by anything," said Mona Ansari, a neighbor. "What happened in her life made her so sad?" Washington (CNN) Jared Kushner, President Donald Trump's son-in-law and senior adviser, has been informed about the Justice Department's decision to remove him from the special counsel's office, a senior administration official told CNN. He will continue to be a senior adviser, but will not have access to the President's schedule or be involved in the implementation of the President's policy in a formal capacity. He has not been relieved of his role as an adviser, but will not have a formal role on foreign policy for the next few weeks. Kushner, who is not the target of the investigation, did not know about the change in the scope of the investigation when he spoke to the FBI earlier this week, according to a person familiar with the matter, and is looking to finalize his own discussions with the Justice Department regarding the scope of his status in the investigation. The Justice Department has refused to discuss the matter. Kushner spoke to the FBI as part of the investigation into whether the President obstructed justice
