Q: Why do trees turn light red during autumn? Everything is golden in autumn, except the trees. The leaves turn in all the colours of the rainbow. They turn red, orange, yellow, purplish, and even green. The appearance of greenness is understandable, since leaves and things like that store sunlight during the summer. However, red leaves are associated with bad luck, in India anyway. Why? A: It's all because of Chlorophyll. Why do bugs and butterflies turn red? Chlorophyll Chlorophyll is an organic compound made from a combination of magnesium, a carbon atom and a pyridine molecule (of which all plants use a small amount). It exists in all green plants and produces plant pigments called phylloxerins which give colour to many flowers and fruits (Purples, Greens and Yellows etc.) as well as being the source of chlorophyll. It is the precursor to Vitamin-B6; both are members of a group of essential vitamins. Chlorophyll can cause many colours in plants. Summarized as: Yellow ----- Green ----- Red ----- Violet Red is the pigment responsible for the 'red' colour. Chlorophyll and the colour of autumn foliage Plants use chlorophyll in Photosynthesis - the process
