“This technology is a long time coming, as we have spent years developing and honing it to the highest performance level,” said Sagnelli. “We knew that the use of motion capture would bring a new level to our players and would complement the AI’s abilities - as well as add a new layer of physicality and realism to our game.” “The real-life data from these motion-capture suits has been very powerful in improving the depth of our player movements, and it is extremely useful when it comes to positioning of the players,” said Jos Luhrs, Head of Co-Operation and Content Development. “Since these movements are recorded on site, we are able to improve and optimize the gameplay during the World Cup. But it also brings a level of realism to FIFA that was never before possible. For example, a real-world player has the ability to communicate with his team with the use of hand signals. FIFA 22

will be the first iteration of the game where players are able to use these.” “We are absolutely amazed by the great work of the teams at EA and DICE who have been working on this technology for years and have created the best possible solution,” added Electronic Arts Worldwide CEO Andrew Wilson. “The analysis and use of the motion capture data from these motion-capture suits has revolutionised the way FIFA is played, looks and feels. Players now have an incredible level of performance and realism and it gives the game that real-world, connected player experience. “The new technology is being used as part of EA Play and will not be playable or visible to the public and on the cover of the game will simply show players during gameplay utilizing the technology.” This new feature continues a history of EA Sports pioneering various technologies that have gone on to be industry standards. FIFA is the original sports game created by EA Canada in its early days to create the highest quality soccer experience on next-generation systems. FIFA has been setting the standard in online and offline sports simulation for more than 20 years. Most players have experience with FIFA Online, the online component of FIFA. EA SPORTS FIFA has been the premier soccer simulation game series for more than 14 years, a position that FIFA Ultimate Team™ has long deserved. FIFA Ultimate Team™, a 100-player squad-building game, is the world's largest soccer trading card game and the third largest trading card game on the market behind Magic the Gathering™ and Yu-Gi-Oh! Trading Card Game™ . It is also the best-selling downloadable content for a sports game. FIFA is EA SPORTS FIFA. Features include: - THE MOST IN-DEPTH FOOTBALL EXPERIENCE - The most authentic and complete football experience ever created. FIFA has more features and content than any other football game, and more realistic animations than all other video games combined. - AN ALL-IN-ONE DEVICE WITH THE BEST ONLINE MULTIPLAYER FEATURES - EA SPORTS FIFA 22 brings gameplay innovations to nearly every aspect of the game. This means that online features are seamlessly integrated into the game's best-selling online mode, the FIFA Ultimate Team™ . - THE FOOTBALL ANIMATIONS - EA SPORTS FIFA 22 marks the first time in franchise history that the FIFA series includes a new dynamic camera system that forces players to maneuver around their computer-controlled opponents, taking realistic collisions and mis-timed shots into account. It also features a new slide tackle system, more precise player control and weighting, an improved goalkeeper AI, and more consistent ball control. - REALISTIC ANIMATIONS - Fans of the FIFA video game series have long demanded high-fidelity animations, and these are an especially significant feature for FIFA 22. EA SPORTS FIFA 22 offers many new animations, and, for the first time in the series' history, all eyes will follow the ball the entire time as players make seemingly impossible moves with the ball. - THE BEST VIDEO OBJECT DETAILING - Deeper and more accurate animation with more realistic qualities, similar to the type and style of rendering you can find in high-end video games. You'll see
