Ask HN: Anyone want to sell their old Sony Vaio? - zeeg a friend recently told me he'd gotten a Sony Vaio for a little over $300 on ebay and that he'd been looking to sell it for a while but couldn't find a buyer (after being on amazon). I was just curious if anyone who's ever had to move their computer has ever had problems selling their computers on ebay?
===== bitwize My partner used to have an old Z80-powered HP color laserjet, refurbished from an unopened box in which no one knew what to do with it. It was all broken, so we did some rework on it and put it on ebay, and made about $120 in cash before figuring out that selling stuff used for "personal use" in Massachusetts by a non-resident is illegal. Needless to say, we didn't keep "hacking away on the remains of a dead computer" for much longer. ----- beatpanda Also, if it's a tablet model, they can't sell to other countries. ~~~ zeeg that's just a little annoying. Q: Measure time in milliseconds How would I be able to measure time in ms in Python? I need to take a picture of a clock, and keep track of the seconds and milliseconds that has passed during the photo. I need this because I need to make a compare function in which the user will see how much time has passed between taking a photo of a clock and taking another photo of a clock. edit: I would like to note that I am not trying to stop the timer that is in the code. I would like to simply detect how much time has passed since I take the photo. A: Use the time module. From the python docs: >>> import time >>> time.sleep(60) # Wait an hour >>> time.sleep(60.0) # Wait a minute, 60 seconds >>> time.sleep(1) # Wait one second >>> time.sleep(1.0) # Wait one millisecond, 1 second >>> time.sleep(1) # Wait one microsecond, 1 nanosecond, 10 millisecond. >>> EDIT: Based on your response, if you want to take a picture of a clock and use the difference to measure time, you'll probably want to start the camera and stop it when the user's done. import cv camera = cv.CaptureFromImage(0) # Initiate the camera cv.StartCapture(camera) # Make an image capture from the camera while(True): image =

camera.QueryFrame() # Wait until we've captured an image from the camera // Do stuff with the image here # For simplicity's sake, assume all clock images are the same size clock_area = image.cvtColor(image, cv.CV_BGR2GRAY) # Converting to grayscale clock_image = clock_area.copy() # Copying over the parts of the image representing the clock clock_lines = cv.findContours(clock_image, cv.RETR_TREE, cv.CHAIN_APPROX_SIMPLE) clock_contour = clock_lines[0] # The first clock area in the image if
