Breast tumors showing significant amounts of myxoid matrix frequently prove difficult to classify. We describe 7 cases showing unique aspects of their histopathology. Two are well-differentiated liposarcomas, characterized by two patterns:

the typical pattern with an aggregated distribution of plump, sometimes haemorrhagic lipoblasts, and the variant pattern with scattered distribution of lipoblastoid cells, showing scattered fat, including some anastomosing strands. The differentiation of the second pattern from myxoid liposarcoma is problematic. Five cases represent spindle-cell myoepithelial tumors with myxoid differentiation. Most of these tumors occurred in perimenopausal patients. The two other cases are salivary myoepitheliomas. The latter tumors show no myxoid matrix. The Iraqi government has been accused of an “outright act of repression” over the arrest of a human rights activist, who also works for the organization Documenta. Ranya Nader, an Iraqi-American journalist and activist, has been held in a Baghdad prison since Sunday, and has not been allowed to
