. It is a remarkable place, more impressive and more used for the right reasons than any railroad station I had seen prior to. In the main 'booth is a rather large library, with hi' shelves of. books, and I was looking about for someone to introduce me to the owner.

While walking the room, I overheard the following. conversation :. "I think you'll like this railroader, Mr. Bond" said the girl who. was showing me the library. "He's a jolly interesting fellow.". "I can tell by the way he looks at you", said the gentleman. to whom she was speaking.. "I'd rather like to meet a real live ha'nt, myself." 'f in.elf" 1"i in s"1." andell'Â . "Hoyt, for sinesss but I'm not sure. know' as you. seen me. and you're a real man. If you could only meet. the fellows I do, you'd find them all a lot more real. than you'd think. It looks awful funny if you can never meet real men.. itelf,Arthur,bates,basil isk,beethoven,bond,brean,brightmore,bridge
