What's new:

- June 2008 Archives Hockey Pro Cooking is still open for entries. Check out for details. The Steamboat FOX online community is having their “New Years Resolutions,” wherein participants eat/cook certain foods for the first day of the year. We’ve had several fine entries so far, including Riceatation Curry and Sausage and Cheese Crepe. If you participate, use the #hockeycooks hashtag on Twitter! Also, the New Years’ Tournament is almost complete, but you still have time to join in it. Read more Season eight is upon us, and it is fitting to start with the most basic and historic dish: The Macaroni and Cheese, often referred to as “macaroni pie”, is a dish of classic American cooking originating sometime around the 19th century. Typically simple yet tasty, this is a staple of the family cook, and incorporates a generous amount of shredded white American cheese. Many dishes have come and gone in the history of American cooking, but this is one that has defined America. In fact, the dish was first served at the Phi Kappa Psi house of the University of Pennsylvania, back in 1874. In the course of preparing, presentations, and discussion of hockey history, we often have people ask, “What are the great sport franchises of the World, and what are the failures and the great culture failures of the team? To answer that query, I’ve designed this four question quiz. You are welcome to answer it in a comment to this post, or if you prefer, email me at icarus@jskline.com. Also, if you’ve got a question you’d like addressed in a future post, feel free to ask! Question #1: Sydney Crosby won the 2002 Stanley Cup with the Pittsburgh Penguins, becoming the youngest player to do so. Other than hockey, what does he do? Question #2: “The Wings. Ain’t No Stopping Us Now.” These are the famous words of Detroit’s Rocky Johnson uttered on February 20, 1990, as the Detroit Red Wings defeated the Vancouver Canucks for the Stanley Cup. Other than hockey, what does he do? Question #3: Nicklas Lidstrom serves as the captain for the Detroit Red Wings and skates in their main video room
