From a basic understanding of numbers and operations to advancedQ: How to clear html/css style inside div, without effecting content inside the div I have div tag inside div tag. Here is the code With the above code, div_child doesn't have any padding, margin, color etc. Now what I want is, clear the padding and margin of the div. How to do that? I tried with this, but it is effecting the content inside the div .div_child { padding: 0; margin: 0; } A: You can use the display property: .div_child { display: block; } Q: Why Matlab does not update constant during a loop? I am trying to optimize a code to get the values of these constants: I am using this for loop to make constant values for k, l: for k=1:10 for l=1:10 kl=0; for i=1:18*30 kl=kl+3; end end end while in the notebook it shows: But when I execute the code in M-file, it does not update l and k: A: The problem is that you declared k 0cc13bf012

I am trying to find a position for an image that can be reused in multiple situations. My approach is to put it in the header of page and overwrite it if needed. I would like to know which files should I be overwriting on change. A: I would put it in a markup called sprite. This HTML tag is able to put multiple images in one HTML element. Image sizes must be 128x128 for this feature to work. See here for more info about sprites CSS: #my-sprite { width: 128px; height: 128px; } #my-sprite img { display: block; width: 128px; height: 128px; } Then, you would overwrite the image place holder with the needed image like this: $(document).ready(function() { $('#my-sprite').attr('src',''); }); So, when you re-size your browser, the images will keep their position. I created this test: HTML:
