It says I should use the following code: mMediaPlayer = MediaPlayer.create(getApplicationContext(), R.raw.commons1); mMediaPlayer.setLooping(true); mMediaPlayer.setVolume(100, 100); mMediaPlayer.setEnabled(true); mMediaPlayer.start(); But when I do that, I get a null pointer exception. My code is as follows: // A pointer to the activity, gets saved in the player member variable public void setPlayer(MediaPlayer p,final int selectedMedia) { mPlayer = p; mSelectedMedia = selectedMedia; } How can I fix this? What am I doing wrong? Thank you. A: This is because MediaPlayer.create() requires a Context and not an ApplicationContext. Try the following: mMediaPlayer = MediaPlayer.create(this, R.raw.commons1); (Assuming that you have an instance of that activity to do it - from the docs you linked to). It's not about fun, but about you and your colleagues learning about biotechnology, and about science, in general, without being a (too) knowledgeable, arrogant biotechnologist. Biomutants will become part of your DNA. Installation ------------ Python folks: .. code:: sh pip install biomutant Rust folks: .. code:: sh cargo install biomutant Add the above lines to your configuration file or a.bashrc file for using Biomutant, coupled with BibDesk, a BibTeX file manager. .. _bibliometrics-algorithms: Research and a postdoc ---------------------- You can also use Biomutant as a research environment without a postdoc, but as that is a postdoc and I would also like to go abroad some day: .. code:: sh pip install biomutant ~/.biomutant Setup ----- `Biomutant`_ is not an application but a `Python`_ application specifically developed for the biomolecular domain. Anything can be converted to all of the biomutants, and the algorithms that unify them: `SciPy-based algebraic rules for converting biological representations to their physical analogues`_, `Bio-Python package applying Biomutant `_, and a nifty `publish.bibtex module`_. Conversion rules are in dictionaries in the file `py-sparse-matrix-transformer/lib/utils/algorithms/conversion-rules.py` Use
