Q: Saving a list to the use of initializing the from scratch when needed So I have a static list of objects, and upon loading, the list has to be copied across to a local temp version until it gets to where the User wants it. This list gets updated every 5 minutes, therefore it needs to always have the newest data to return a current list. Is there a way to initialize this list from scratch without having to copy and past from the local version? A: I would set up a method that copies the data locally and then copies it back when the App is restarted. This way if the user does not run the app for a while (yes, I know a bit of exaggeration but I was testing it today) it will still keep the data. Q: Erlang: last byte of a message is not sent Using Erlang 19 (Mnesia+Omega) to send a message with Rlm_mgmt_exec_opts:block_log_bytes_sent set to an integer value. The message is sent with a pid to an erlang process. The last byte of the message is not sent. The code is:

Start Up Loans and Second Proposed Cinemas Locals voted down a second cinema because it would have increased the population of 'East Six Mile' The news of this morning was that Peckham had voted down the second cinema and more specifically the local landlords and residents voted down the second cinema as its increase in population of East Six Mile would have been a 'problem'. Some of the councillors were in a nervous position in the face of the vote; one of the councillors advised the landlords to change their plans and if that failed they should consider renting the cinema out. However, this advice fell on deaf ears as the latter only wanted to focus on the money they could make from the increased population. A reminder from Peabody: 'You and only you can make the difference in Peckham... if you want to knock a local off the list of people who should retire to the Mediterranean you've got to tell everyone you've got a councillor who's on the council wrong.' The councillors do not get a lot of praise in this blog, but this is their job and if they want to keep it and people are happy then so be it. Please send the councillors some more praise on our Facebook and Twitter pages. Note: Peckham Liberal Democrats appear in the blue colour on Facebook and Twitter. Tuesday, the Ambrosus lab system will provide an automatic and decentralized tracking platform for products from production through end-use, generating products that are tamper-proof and proof-of-origin. The system is based on a tokenized supply chain that allows brands and suppliers to adhere to sustainability standards, as well as receive data on product quality, authenticity, and origin. According to Ambrosus, the project will tap into the Ambrosus Supply Chain Network, which is an open-source blockchain network that connects data from all facets of the supply chain. Through the Ambrosus Supply Chain Network, the Ambrosus global network's 3.0 version, Ambrosus will integrate brands and suppliers' products to the Ambrosus Global Network, which provides businesses with access to a distributed ledger and data collection through a blockchain-enabled platform.
