“The FIFA team was behind an unprecedented number of hours of high-definition camera footage for working on the player movements and player likeness and we are excited to finally get to this stage,” stated Aleksander Holz,

FIFA Producer. “By replicating the realistic movement of the players, we hope players can experience the true sense of player-to-player contact when playing FIFA 22.” The integration of HyperMotion Technology is only available at Competitive Seasons and League modes. That will be the debut of the technology, with more user-facing features to be revealed in the future.

New features and fixes: Quick Clicks: 3D touches that allow users to quickly and easily pick up, throw, slide and shoot the ball. New Skill Linking System: Players are now able to train and compete on the same player, team or field using the new Skill Linking System. Player Motions: Player movements now scale as the pitch or pitch size moves, with some of the player's movements now fitting into an overhead view. Improved Coach Intelligence: Changes have been made to the Coach AI to make it smarter, more intuitive and easier to understand. Significant Player Weight Changes: The weight of players has been revised to help make the game more responsive and more reminiscent of real-life football. Unified Skinned Player Look Engine: This new engine allows players to have different skin appearances from one another and is used in all body type variations, from Normal to Overweight to Physically Enhanced. Races: Two new locations have been added to the playable roster of six races. The African League and the Indian League have both been redesigned with new stadiums and plays to match. Defending: When defending against an attack, players now move closer to their goalkeeper.

Goalkeeper Feint System: Goalkeepers can now feint to the ball when their goalkeeper instincts kick in. Interim: The new Interim system now allows players to score from a cut-back, and when the player with the ball is closer to goal than the defender. Dribbling

System: The dribbling system has been reworked to provide players with a more accurate ball control, while also adding some new features like tackling and flicking. Ball Tipping: When a player receives the ball on the wing, they are now able to flick it towards the goal or to one

Features Key:

- Adapting to what you see. When played in-game, FIFA's cameras paint a picture of your arena from left to right based on the viewpoint of your opponents. You can call upon this information by adjusting the camera angle and position, or by replicating the visual on a virtual pitch in the Editor.
- Collision. More head-first tackles, more collisions, and more motion capture. "HyperMotion" makes every action, tackle, and run near you feel like a Hollywood blockbuster.
- Skill moves. Master all of the new head-to-head, body control, and off-the-ball skill moves, which lets you make more goals and tackles to showcase your ability.
- Pro Savvy. FIFA 22 tracks every interaction with the ball, every run, every pass, in a wealth of new ways. The Producer Explains: "Our team are working hard to analyse every player's performance."
- New mechanics make for more goals. For the first time in the series, certain dribbling techniques and by-product passes have been factored into the trajectory of a player. If you fake someone out and then pass, your pass will now face towards the player that was being dribbled past. You'll have to take advantage of every opportunity if you want to be the all-time leading scorer.
