Now you can make the transcode of DVD movie .SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. -- TCU hadn't won an NCAA Tournament game since 1991, a night before it fell in the national semifinals, and most believed it would take a miracle to win Saturday's championship game against Wichita State. A man named (well, a fan named) Mike Lee just pulled off a one-man miracle. See, Mike Lee saw a pattern on Wichita State's defense. He saw a tendency for the Shockers to leave one of their centers, Kennedy Meeks, on the perimeter to guard opposing smaller players. It didn't matter whether they were shooting a shot or posting up; they always left Meeks in the corner to guard players with smaller bodies. So, when the Shockers were isolating Meeks on Wesley Gordon, Mike Lee sat down in the corner and recorded Meeks's every move. Then, after the game, Mike Lee sent the tape of Meeks to Kenny Wheaton, a sportswriter at the Wichita Eagle. And that was that. Meeks got his trip to the Final Four. Obviously, it was a fluke play that allowed a former college basketball coach to be a hero. And that wasn't bad for a guy who had a main job interview canceled earlier in the day because of the NCAA Tournament. When Mike Lee heard about Wichita State coach Gregg Marshall's timing problems, it put the two-time national champion into a dilemma. Should he hustle to give the TCU fan a job? Or would it be more productive to let history play out? "I made a conscious decision that I didn't want to ruin his chances of getting a job," said Mike Lee, who is currently a legal assistant at Lathrop & Clark in Fort Worth. "He put some pressure on me to make a decision." Marshall used to coach Meeks at Texas A&M, and he probably saw some of the same things on the Wichita State team that he had seen at Texas A&M. So he decided to call the company and tell them he was interested. "I was disappointed that I didn't

At the time, the surety we were searching for was with the same insurer. We had many questions about what kind of work we were being covered for, but when we called our insurance company they weren't sure of the answer. So our surety provider explained to them what we needed and why. After a few calls, it turned out we were being covered by one of their sub-insurers. When the project went over budget we needed our surety provider to add coverage to cover more work and extras we had not put in the proposal. The team at Industry Surety was able to cover us with no issues. One important thing we learned from the situation is that our insurance company did not get a new proposal with additional work, but they did update their records. They had us in their list of contractors, and they wanted to know where they stood. It was all for the best and we were able to deal with this all at the same time without having to change the terms of our contract. Contact Industry Surety today if you need surety. We will be happy to answer any questions you have about any type of surety: About Industry Surety Industry Surety is a surety provider that specializes in facility surety, property and equipment, claims
