I always thought that FM17 gameplay was as good as it could get but Fifa 22, with additional features and improvements, has been just that. Let us start with the actual game, it is a huge step up in graphics from last year, it seems like a very good "pinnacle" of the series (I mean this in a good way). Speaking of graphics, this time it seems like the full engine of the game has been upgraded, they have developed it a little further, to give the game the feeling that it would look better than the Fifa 18 and PES 2018. The gameplay of FM17 was awesome and Fifa 22 has huge improvements in every aspect of it. The passing is now much more realistic and the AI of the defenders is a lot better, they are now able to defend much more aggressively. The player's animations are great and the camera mechanics has been upgraded as well, making the game even better. The touch controls have also been improved. The first time I switched on the game, I just went "Damn, it feels amazing, man! This is what I was aiming for". I felt like playing a live match, everything was just simply right and most importantly, the gameplay feels very easy, the difficulty is fine. I think the biggest upgrade will be the "Career Mode" where you start with a small club, you get to choose the manager you are going to be and you start growing your club, and you can also add more realistic rules to the game. Each time your club gets promoted to the higher leagues, you get rewarded with more money. Speaking about the game itself, it feels less like a football game and more like a football simulator. While playing this year's game, you are able to feel like you are actually playing the match, and you are also able to see what happens and what time the events takes, this time there is also a "simulation" where
