turn your head to the left or right direction -You are not driving, so do not take your eyes off the road. Sometimes the neighborhood looks so perfect, it's frightening. Maybe it's not. Somewhere in my head, there might be a better version. So I had to bring it here. This real life version of Creedancer is your game-play mechanic. You have to clear the screen of obstacles. Some of them are traps. Some are harmless, but they can make the game more challenging, or even make you angry and lose the game. You can use AR-Brick or Mouse for playing. If you want to play in fullscreen, AR-Brick for widescreen, and Mouse to play in VR. Partners "The experience was absolutely phenomenal, and I'm shocked at the level of depth of gameplay without the need for any kind of head tracking.💎"

What's new in Unblocking:

Google Youtube Search I am trying to unblock the youtube search from the portable version of Windows using an app called Everything for Windows (through the connected AppGallery) - but for some reason my attempts to block or unblock the YouTube search from my search dialog are, at best, ignored, and at worst, just cause Google to crash completely (and after wiping the cache, the unblocking still doesn't work - I just get dumped into the Google Search settings Window). Right now - I'm trying to either unblock the Youtube search using a browser that I'm using Google to search (searching with Google from the browser and choosing the "YouTube" option, on the Youtube site). I am able to search YouTube from the browser, and can also search for a video successfully from a mobile device - but when I go back to plug in the microphone and/or camera to the Windows desktop, even though I'm still controlling the browser from the browser (so I am, basically, searching the entire YouTube site - I get the video listed (as a thumbnail) in the YouTube app - and the video title, but then when I use the [Back Arrow] to "go back" to the "browser" I am again asked to "Go to YouTube." Is there an application for Windows 8 that I can use to unblock all of this Youtube functionality out of the search dialog (and eventually, in the Facebook App Dialog) so that I can search the entire YouTube site from the Windows Desktop? After doing a reinstall with Windows 7 last night, I'm stumped as to whether I can even get this to work from my portrait mode display... if I boot to a normal windowed Windows 8, it is just fine. Oh, and I also forgot to mention that I'm an IT Auditor for my day job, and the workplace uses Windows 7 and Windows 8

As an IT Auditor, I get to work on all of my Windows 7, Windows 8, and Windows 8.1 machines, but most of my 8.1 time is spent not on Windows 8.1, but on Windows 7 (testing their enterprise environments), and, occasionally, they'll give me an 8.1 laptop to run - but then,
