by fear rather than love, we are being motivated by what we think is true rather than what is true. When we are caught in fear-filled thoughts and feelings, we lose sight of what's true, and we begin to make decisions that don't lead to a deep experience of peace. When we choose to focus on what is true, we make conscious decisions and are able to recognize and avoid behavior that leads us into conflict or self-defeat. This means we can choose to escape a fearful choice rather than being trapped in it. It's never too late to develop mindfulness. Sometimes we must confront a difficult choice in order to learn about ourselves and develop our spiritual abilities. We may think that it's best not to confront our fears at all, but this is often an unconscious reaction to living in a world that is increasingly filled with fear. Even when we think we are making a rational decision, in reality we are usually making a choice based on fear. My image of choice is of wisdom choosing fearlessness, but this does not take away the possibility that the opposite choice might be wiser. The freedom of choice comes at the cost of all our fears. Fear is the cause of the separation and limitation that we live in; we lose our freedom to be the creator of our own life when we are not consciously aware of what is true. By making decisions driven by fear, we are limited by our beliefs and thinking, no matter how rational we may think they are. If you want to grow, you must learn to choose fearlessly.

The world is divided into two camps: those who choose to grow (choose freedom) and those who choose to remain frightened (stay in fear). There is no such thing as a "good" fear, nor is there any such thing as a "bad" fear. The only fear is fear itself e79caf774b

METHODS: A two-group randomised controlled trial with participants from a sports training centre was conducted in Gondar, Ethiopia. One group was trained to perform a regular moderate-intensity physical activity over a 5-week period, while a control group who did not participate in physical activity continued their usual training. The physical activity was done on a rowing machine that can measure physical and physiological parameters. Anthropometric and biochemical measurements were taken after a 10-hour overnight fast. the control group, after adjusting for energy intake and baseline status. Total cholesterol and triglyceride (TG) levels were significantly lower in the physical activity group after adjusting for energy intake and baseline values.

CONCLUSION: Physical activity in adolescent school students in Ethiopia was associated with improved lipid profiles and reduced HbA1c levels. The UK budget: a step back for maternity services? The British fiscal constraint imposed on health services is a legislative challenge that can undermine patient care and services. In this article we explain why the repeal of Clause 60 of the Clinical Carriage of Patients (Scotland) Act 1991 (CCPSA) in Scotland has not resulted in cost containment of maternity services. Despite Scottish Government's rhetoric to the contrary, this repeal has actually resulted in additional cost to the Scottish NHS with no corresponding improvement in services. In fact, expenditure on maternity services, in Scotland has gone up by 50 per cent more since 1991 than during the previous period of prosperity. In Scotland, 6500 women were being admitted to hospital for a first birth every year. If they had continued with that same birth
