 The following is a 'how-to' guide for the Luna Engine. You can skip these if you like, but the guide is very thorough. It explains and illustrates each function and script available, how it can be used, and how it works. *****
===== UNLOCKING ===== Unlocking usually requires a flat amount of tokens. Luna has a custom token system, but most tokens that are required are stored in a general account and are unlimited. === ===== SCREENSHOTS
===== To create your own graphics, simply open the 'Game Graphics' menu and select the 'Create New' option. When you have finished, save the screenshot using the 'Save' option and set the 'Size' to 'Custom'. === ===== INTERFACE
===== Luna has a single menu that is common across all scripts. This menu can be accessed by using the 'Menu' button. There are many configuration options, depending on the script that is using it. All scripts except side-view are compatible. This guide will explain what each setting means, where it's stored, and how it's used. == ===== TITLE
===== This sets the title of the GUI and button. If you wish to change the font, then the font setting is where you do this. Note: The title that is displayed in-game is the 'header' displayed above the menu. Note: The title for side-view battlers is based on the window's position. Line 1: - Title - This is the title of the menu that displays on-screen. - Font - Used for titles, text in settings menus, and messages displayed Line 2: - Title Name - The title name that will be displayed in the title (eg, fight). - Position - This is the position on the window (top-

Q: MacLaurin series of inverse function I've got a question about Maclaurin series of inverse function. I was just looking at this video on Maclaurin series and I noticed that depending on the value of the function, the Maclaurin series might not necessarily converge. For instance consider the following argument: Let $f(x) = \sqrt{1+x}$ then the Maclaurin series for f^{-1} is $1 + \frac{x}{2} + \frac{x^2}{4} + \frac{x^3}{8} + \frac{x^4}{16} + \frac{x^5}{16} + \frac{x^6}{32} + \frac{x^7}{32} + \frac{x^8}{64} + \dots$ plugging $x=1$ in it yields $f^{-1}(1) = 1$ which is wrong since $f^{-1}(1)$ is infinite. So I was wondering why when the range of f is finite, then in general, the Maclaurin series has to converge? Thanks in advance.

A: You're looking at a textbook example of a domain in which Maclaurin series may not make sense. If the Maclaurin series converges in the domain of f^{-1} then it must converge as well in all the points above its range. In your example you have $x=1$, hence $1=f(1)$

Cambridge History of English and American Literature in 18 Volumes (1907-21). VOLUME XVIII. Early National Literature, Part II; Early National Literature, Part III, and Later National Literature. XVIII. The Pastoral and the Epic. § 9. Childe Harold's Pilgrimage. Childe Harold's Pilgrimage has gained its place in literature from its power of inspiring and appealing to the imagination. It is immortal now that it has given inspiration to the aspiring poet of twenty-first century.

Preface In the old, old story of the Pilgrim's Progress, Christian says, in the name of good old Parson, whose noble aim it was to preach of Jesus Christ, His salvation, (John 3:20), to the bad man: "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble." (1st Kings 21:28) The history of the Pilgrim's Progress, as it is now known, is a very strange mixture of the old biblical story and the new biblical story: of the Christian's life, as exemplified by the Protestant reformers and their followers. This peculiar mixture is attributed to the author, John Bunyan. It is with some diffidence, and some misgivings on account of its length, that I undertake here to follow the complicated course that Bunyan took in the execution of his purpose. Of the modern allegory which he has made, and which he has called, Pilgrim's Progress, I shall, as briefly as I can, speak in a subsequent chapter. Introduction A period of a little less than a century has been the
