thelsoenzyme electrophoresis in human leukemic cells: identification of a disease-specific band in CLL cells. Whole cell extracts from a panel of leukemic cells with different immunologic phenotypes were subjected to isoelectric focusing and subsequent slab-gel electrophoresis. The pattern of protein bands obtained in these studies revealed some common and some disease-specific patterns.
The common features of these patterns are the presence of bands with isoelectric points between 5.5 and 6.5 and 6.5 and 8. Two disease-specific bands were detected in cells with immunoglobulins of the IgM isotype but not in those with IgA and IgG. This suggests that a quantitative deficiency or qualitative defect of the electrophoretically moving components of these cells is responsible for the absence of the disease-specific bands in the latter cells. In CLL cells, the loss of the IgM-specific band is a characteristic feature of these cells, as it is not found in other leukemic cells.Q: Why can't my
