My connection keeps rejecting the keys. The errors keep pointing to the s_server_method function as being the problem. This is very odd because the same code works fine with the certificate based authentication. Using an online https server, I downloaded the truststore and keystore certificates and imported them into the java keystore. The java keystore has been then added to the truststore and used to produce the truststore in python. This is the curl command that works: curl -v -H "accept: application/json" -H "Content-Type: application/json" --data @- -k -K -u authKey --cert authCert.pem However, when I add the -H "accept: application/json" -H "Content-Type: application/json" the python code fails: f = urllib.request.urlopen('', authkey='authKey', cert='authCert.pem') #print(f.read()) data = json.loads(f.read()) print(data) And here is the Error
