Newbie question Hi, I have just started berk and I have a question about the lingo that is involved in berk. As I understand it there are two ways to analyse a language: Analysing a word or phrase, ie comparing it to "real" English. If I am right in my understanding there are several different types of analysing a word or phrase, ie analysing it grammatically analysing it lexicographically analysing it from the point of view of the dictionary (ie is it in the dictionary) analysing the different meanings analysing its use in a given language analysing its use across languages I am actually particularly interested in the last two points which I think involve using dictionaries or looking it up online. The reason for this is that I have just started looking at berk and I can only find one dictionary online. I am a little confused about how to use this dictionary as it seems to be a reference work rather than a dictionary, and I wondered if anyone could help me out with this. I am also a bit confused about the following: A bit of the berk dictionary looks like it is written in a foreign language, ie very informal. Does this mean it is not suitable to be used when analysing a berkian language? For example, if I am analysing a berkian language and I read the word "wok", how would I know if I am reading berkian language or kipian language? Does this mean that I have to use a dictionary that is specifically designed to be a dictionary of the kipian or berkian language? Yes, it seems to me that it is like the old fashioned dictionaries. But the difference is that this dictionary is now written in the contemporary language of the pashta so that you can know more things than just
