At elasto-viscoplastic theory of nonlinear deformation of heterogeneous material is used in the present study. A constitutive model describing the strain rate dependence of stiffness of myocardial tissue is used to derive constitutive stress-deformation relations which are necessary to obtain stress-deformation relations for viscoplastic materials. The existence of a critical strain rate is shown to lead to a non-linear critical stress-strain relation at strains larger than a critical one, and a linear relation corresponding to uniaxial compression in the low strain rate range. The critical and linear stress-strain relations obtained in the present study are in agreement with the experimental data.Q: How to fix firestore security rules to allow only when other document in that collection exist and user is logged in In one of my firestore data collections, I store information about time frame and other users name the user is attending a class.
