
Nerd Of The Year Supraja I.R.

i've always been interested in what makes people tick and what makes them tick off. it started with my exploration of psychology in uni. i studied the psychological effects of fame and wanted to know how we reacted to it. i learned that the majority of people get a bit jealous of our fame but it's not as bad as it seems. i also have a strong drive for social justice. my senior year at queens, i ran for peer counselor at a residential placement unit, and i was in charge of looking after 14 boys, and the only girls in the room. i would have to get them to bed and monitor their medications before school. it was very, very hard but everyone got better. i am now working in secondary education, and i help children with special educational needs. i have always been interested in technology, mathematics and science. but now that i'm in the media and broadcast field, i am finally getting to put all my knowledge together. i want to change how people learn and what they know about the world. i know it's a really hard task, but i've started making headway. i love designing, and i want to know how i can best design technology to work with each other to change the way the world works. i want to help people get all their life they've been missing out on. my office is conveniently located downtown near both downtown crossing (orange line) and south station (red line). i work with a diverse population of adults including individuals, couples and groups. i have many years of experience working with the special needs of gay men and women and transgendered individuals. i also have special training and a lot of experience working with people who have survived short and long term trauma.

the most surprising thing about working as a clinical social worker is that i get to help people with their own problems and issues that they just cant seem to get past. i always tell them to stay strong and dont let this thing beat you. after dealing with a lot of abuse at work, i was victim to it at home as well. i finally woke up and left my abusive partners. i want to be able to help other people like me. this has been a dream of mine since i was young, and its been a long time coming. i am super proud to be a certified grief counselor, and i hope to help others who are going through a rough time. im still a nerd at heart, and i just love making other people feel better. i will be a third-year b.a candidate at university of london, and i want to study english literature and historical research, so i have been interested in victorians history. at the moment, i am working on my b.a thesis on jane austen's letters, and am writing my own critical review of the topic. i am interested in the 19th century english literary canon and victorian critical issues. victorian literature is what i'm particularly passionate about, and i think that it is an incredibly underappreciated field. i am starting my first master's degree in biomedical engineering at university college london, and so i work mostly with researching and developing new diagnostic tools. i have been studying the importance of studying the microbiome within human body in healthy and unhealthy conditions. i have also been researching the microbial influence on diseases in humans. my current goal is to apply this knowledge to the development of new and improved ways of diagnosing digestive disorders. 5ec8ef588b
