Wild-card weekend brings a great collection of teams to the epicenter of the football universe, not unlike Christmas morning. The marquee game pits No. 1 vs No. 2 in the College Football Playoff rankings, and, if history holds, we could see a rematch of the 2016 BCS Championship. The two matchups highlight the weekend, however, as it also features a pair of strong Big Ten teams looking to right the ship after consecutive losses in their conference title game. The pressure is there, as well, for the Big Ten, which will be looking to end a four-year streak of Rose Bowl-esque bowl losses. The San Francisco 49ers are 2-2 on the season but this game is about more than just the final two victories. The 49ers face an undefeated Green Bay Packers team who are looking to keep their championship aspirations alive. The Packers have a quarterback battle that's coming down to Week 4, and although it's been won by the starter going into the year, the Packers are at risk of losing their guy if Aaron Rodgers doesn't regain his form. San Francisco, on the other hand, has a rookie quarterback and his performance last week has been marked by both his and the team's struggles. If the Packers lose, and it looks like they may, how they'll react will be fascinating to see, although you can't blame them for going all-in on their quarterback of the future. This is a big game for the 49ers and Packers and San Francisco will be looking to pick up the pieces. The Atlanta Braves are one win away from securing the first World Series championship in franchise history. Regardless of how this one turns out, this is a huge moment for the team and the fans. There are nine hours until kickoff, so catch the entire game on FOX.
