You are here National Research Foundation of Korea The National Research Foundation of Korea (NRF) is a South Korean government funded corporation, and an affiliate of the Ministry of Science, ICT and Future Planning. They are independent from the Korean government and funded through the Ministry. The NRF is devoted to supporting basic research in all fields of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics, with a focus on fundamental research. The foundation funds basic research, supporting new discoveries and understanding, and discovery. The NRF funds about 10% of the total research and development budget of South Korea and is funded by the Korean government. The fund is divided into four groups; basic, applied, core, and private. However, the funding is on a competitive basis, so that only the ones that are able to attract the funds can get the funds. The support of NRF can be applied to any discipline in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics. The primary purpose of the National Research Foundation is to develop the fundamental knowledge on the basis of scientific and technological progress for long-term economic growth and sustainable development. Thus, the Foundation attempts to address some of the greatest scientific and technological challenges facing South Korea and the world. Main objectives and activities The national research foundation of South Korea has the following main objectives; Funds basic research, discovery, and knowledge, and develops the scientific and technological foundations of the Korea economy. Institutes various academic and scientific organizations such as the Korean Research Institute of Bioscience and Biotechnology, the Korea Institute of Science and Technology, and the Korea Ocean Cluster. National Research Foundation of Korea (NRF) manages 13 independent research institutes including The National Agricultural Biotechnology Center, Chonnam National University, the Korea Basic Science Institute, the Korea Evaluation Institute of Industrial Technology,
