In such case, there would be no need to establish "reasonable suspicion" since proof of probable cause is not required for a search warrant. In this case, however, the affidavit was insufficient to show "probable cause." The terms "reasonable suspicion" and "probable cause" have been given liberal construction in favor of the right of the people to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures. State v. McMillan, 115 Idaho 434, 767 P.2d 1284 (Ct.App.1989). Our standard of review for a magistrate's determination of probable cause is whether the magistrate had a "substantial basis for concluding that a search would uncover
