He dropped his daughter off at school and then stood in the parking lot and wept. “I was very emotional. I cried like a baby,” he said. “I’m a father. I have two beautiful daughters, I have a wife. I think she would understand. But if I was her age or younger, it probably would have been difficult for me to explain. So I’m just making myself available to my girls and do what I feel I have to do.” He said he’s been through a lot. He and Penny moved to Minnesota when Penny’s job at a billiards hall closed. They married in 2007, and then 10 days later, Penny walked out, saying his wife was having an affair. “I think she’s been sad most of her life,” said their daughter, Michelle. “He’s been sad most of his life.” Penny tried to get a fresh start but found it difficult to get back into the pool game. Penny and his wife met each other again, and Penny agreed to a divorce in 2012. She also filed for a restraining order against her husband, who'd become increasingly angry. "I've had some rough times," he said. Now he has a new wife. He's been dating the woman for two years. She's treated him like a prince, he said
