If you've been injured, be sure to ice the affected area right away. Ice packs can provide relief and reduce swelling, which can help speed up the healing process. Sucking on ice chips can also offer similar benefits. Corsi Try to stand and move on your toes. Assume a walking position and try to kick your leg up and over your head. Focus on walking up and down your leg. Performing this exercise 2-3 times daily can help reduce swelling. Corsi Standing on your tiptoes: Stand with your right foot in front of you. Balance your weight on your left foot. Keeping your left foot in that position, stand on your right foot. Touch your right toes to the floor and then slowly bring your right foot to the floor. Keeping your left foot out in front of you, walk and shuffle your foot back and forth across the floor. Perform this movement until you have completed five repetitions. Corsi Do your best to move your toes as part of your recovery program. To complete this exercise, first allow your leg to touch the floor, then stand up on your toes. Corsi Learning to walk again is easier when your arm is in the air, as the support provided by the arm helps prevent
